NEIL HICKEY REPORTS:

NBC News producer GEORGE MURRAY is working on an hour-long show on the 25th anniversary of ROMMEL's historic defeat at the Battle of El Alamein. It's set for Dec. 22 . . . SAM JAFFE, ABC's Hong Kong-based newsman, will vacation in his wife's native land, New Zealand, and may do some news features from there . . . PAT McCORMICK, a Kraft Music Hall writer, has teamed with JACK DOUGLAS to create a television pilot which they're offering to CBS.

On Dec. 11 DANNY THOMAS stars as a bachelor prince in his series' musical presentation of "The Royal Follies of 1933" . . . ABC's personality study "Coach Bryant: Alabama's Bear," originally shown on Oct. 23, is to be repeated on Dec. 31 . . . On Sunday, Dec. 17, Look Up and Live will examine the continuing problem of Arab refugees in the Holy Land. Area relief work being done by church and private organizations will be discussed.

ABC reports that the Jan. 23 telecast of the National Basketball Association All-Star Game will originate from the new Madison Square Garden if the building is completed in time . . . Dec. 31 is the date for both the AFL and the NFL championship football games, carried by NBC and CBS respectively. On Jan. 14 the winners clash in the Super Bowl, to be telecast by CBS from Miami.

WILLIAM HANLEY's much-heralded original play "Flesh and Blood" is scheduled for Jan. 26 on NBC; EDMOND O'BRIEN, KIM STANLEY, E.G. MARSHALL, SUZANNE PLESSETTE, KIM DARBY and ROBERT DUVAL star . . . ABC has set Jan. 17 for its presentation of "Laura," the two-hour mystery starring Princess LEE RADZIWIŁL . . . Two NBC staff announcers, ROGER TUTTLE and JERRY DAMON, whose hobby is flying, plan to sponsor a big exhibition of private airplanes at the New York Coliseum next September. It'll be the first such exposition of its kind in the world, they say.

CBS's Children's Film Festival series, featuring award-winning films from around the world, returns to the air on Feb. 4. Three of last season's favorites will be repeated: Japan's "Skinny and Fatty," Russia's "The Blind Bird" and England's "Hand in Hand" . . . On Jan. 7 NBC brings back its award-winning nature-study series called Animal Secrets . . . British actress BILLIE WHITELAW, who has a role in ABC's Jan. 7 production of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," was voted Television Actress of the Year by England's TV Academy.

as we see it

■ French television isn't very good, but then there isn't much of it. That balanced things nicely until Le Grand Charles decreed, "Let there be color!" Now their TV is mediocre and there isn't much of it but they've got color—which really flattens the soufflé.

The color itself is sort of comme ci, comme ça. At least the Russians, who adopted the French SECAM color system, have decided to modify it somewhat before trying it on Soviet viewers. (It's sort of a secret in Paris and Moscow, but the SECAM system isn't exactly a French invention—it's a development of the U.S. color system.)

■ For a long time there was only one channel available to French viewers. The hottest show they had was Adventures in Paradise, and when that ran out it was Wanted—Dead or Alive, and then it was Burke's Law. Anyway, there were three popular Americans in France—Gardner McKay, Steve McQueen and Gene Barry.

Then De Gaulle found out that the West Germans and Italians had a choice of channels so he ordered another channel for France. To make things simple, the new channel was to operate with a 625-line picture. The old one had an 819-line picture. This made sets expensive—even without the 25 percent tax. And now color.

■ It's really academic because the color sets cost upward of $1000 and there are only a couple of thousand in the homes of viewers—a goodly number of whom are government officials. And even those who have the sets aren't quite ecstatic because black-and-white shows come over rather shakily on them. (A rental company gives you a rent-free black-and-white set if you rent a color set.)

So French television is in a bit of a mess, but De Gaulle is happy. He has proved that anything the Americans can do the French can do—sort of.

More body-building protein than

There's tasty beef in those little pies. And because they're bulging with beef, they have more protein than a plain old peanut butter sandwich or a boiled ham sandwich. Even more than 4 bowls of beef noodle soup. And each serving costs only about 18¢.

But don't tell kids that. They gobble up Chef Boy-Ar-Dee® Ravioli because it's deliciously different. From now on, you don't have to give kids a reason for eating. Just a reason for eating slowly.

From cuts

to nicks

Nobody knows for sure if men used to wear beards because they were being fashionable, or they were just being chicken.

When you consider that the first legitimate shaving instrument was a honed-down clamshell, we're inclined to believe the latter.

We're in the business of improving on clamshells. We've become big by improving on everything else.

Our most recent improvement is officially known as the REMINGTON® Selectro shaver.

Unofficially we like to refer to it as The Safety Shaver.

It doesn't cut you. It doesn't nick you. And it doesn't leave you with the irritating aftereffects.

It does all this with The Safety Dial and The Safety Combs.

The Safety Dial raises and lowers the shaver heads. The Safety Combs (which remain stationary) expose the correct amount of shaving surface—letting in all of the whiskers and keeping out the skin.

In effect, the dial raises and lowers the shaver heads to four different comfort positions.

Because not everyone has one kind of face.

You may have a heavy beard. Or a light one. Or you might be a middleweight. Or a welterweight.

And though you may be able to take a lot on the cheek, you may not be able to take it on the chin.

The dial takes care of all that. With it you can custom dial a face, a chin or a cheek, a neck or a mustache.

You can also custom dial a trim with the biggest sideburn trimmer anyone has ever developed.

And you can clean the whole works with just a click and a Pffft.

Someday somebody may invent a pill that does away with shaving completely. (We frankly hope it doesn't happen for quite a while.) But right now, the closest thing (and the closest shave) to that significant development is our own.

The Safety Shaver.

It makes shaving something less than a hairy proposition.

Three noted Hollywood producers contend they aren't responsible for the quality of TV programs

BY JOSEPH FINNIGAN

Hollywood's producers are dropping out. The creators are giving up trying to be creative. The men who make the entertainment shows for the Nation's TV screens have almost abandoned hope of improving their products.

Don't ask us to upgrade our programs, they say. It's not our table.

Despite some dissent, this is the message that came through when three of the town's most successful producers—who among them fill 14 hours of prime time every week—gathered a few weeks ago at the Hollywood Press Club to answer questions from newsmen and club members. Most of the questions zeroed in on one issue: Why isn't TV better?

Jackie Cooper, who now is in charge of production for prosperous Screen Gems, offered the most succinct—and gloomy—reply. "You're asking the wrong people," he said. "We're just the producers. Talk to the buyers. They say, 'We don't care what you think. This is what we want.'"

Cooper's co-panelists were William Self, 20th Century-Fox's production chief; and Grant Tinker, who oversees Universal's network programming. Each man in his own way disavowed responsibility for the current state of television, placing the burden of guilt on the shoulders of the networks.

"A lot of lip service is given to change," said Self, whose studio produces Batman, Lost in Space, Daniel Boone, Peyton Place and Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea. Self says, by and large, Fox is doing a good job of producing "for the market place."

Tinker, who came to his present job by way of NBC programming and whose present studio produces The Virginian, World Premiere (TV movies) and Run for Your Life, answered the question by saying, "For too long people have expected too much—seven days a week. It is not possible with the time we have to fill." But, he added, "The quality is up; the TV critics' expectations are down and the audience numbers are up."

All in all, it was an amazing display of candor for men so highly placed in the business. To Cooper, who is responsible for Bewitched, The Flying Nun and I Dream of Jeannie, Hollywood is a "factory," a place where orders for TV series are filled, much in the manner that Pittsburgh makes steel and Vienna mixes sausages. Those ratings-oriented buyers, he said, stifle creativity: "We have ideas. We get shot down in flames all the time. We're dealing with people who say, 'We want a cop show here, a Green Acres there.'"

Even his studio's Flying Nun was spoon-fed to Screen Gems. "A guy on Madison Avenue got the idea from a book and sent it to [executive producer] Harry Ackerman," Cooper said.

And Self sold Fox's Felony Squad merely on a hunch that there was a demand for cops and robbers on ABC. "We looked at the network schedule and saw that at the time there was no police show on the air," he said.

An ABC executive brought Batman to Self's attention. "Ed Scherick [then ABC's programming chieftain] asked me if I had ever read 'Batman.' I said I had never read it. I had, but wouldn't admit it. I asked him if he had anything to read on it and he gave me 30 'Batman' comic books. I had them wrapped in newspaper before I went back to my hotel. Didn't want anybody to see me walking in the lobby."

It should be noted that there is not complete unanimity among Hollywood's executives about the hopelessness of the situation. Cooper's concept of Hollywood as a "factory" town is not shared by every successful couragement from the network. They never said they wanted this or that."

Others have been less fortunate than Huggins. The Monroes is a classic case of a "buyer" changing the original pattern to fit a pedestrian situation. That show's producers had high hopes when Monroes went on ABC in September last year. Producer Fred Brogger envisioned a realistic story line about an orphaned family fighting to survive in the 19th-century West. "We have a commitment to give an honest portrayal of what the West was really like," he said at the time. Despite high critical praise, Brogger was out of a job not long afterward, when the show's ratings didn't measure up. The word came down: "Disney-ize it." Children, bears and animals were brought in to lure family trade. A new producer was hired to point The Monroes in a new direction, one more acceptable to the "buyer." "We have a dog in the show," he said at the time. "Not just a dog. He is a member of the family who just happens to be a dog." Some weeks later, the show passed into oblivion, good bears, bad bears, dogs and all.

Not that the problem is a new one. A few years ago New York producer David Susskind came to town. He told a reporter, "No important decisions are made in Hollywood." The reporter then asked, "Then we're all a bunch of shoemakers out here?" "Yes," he replied. "Then," he was asked, "why don't you send us a better pattern?"

Rod (Twilight Zone) Serling, TV's aging wunderkind who used to be famous for circumventing the "pattern," was asked how it looked to him now. "Like a bad, rich dream," he replied. "In essence what Cooper says is valid. There is a chain of command which lets the seller know what is wanted; and although he might say something 'different,' 'novel,' 'new,' what he really wants is the same horse that won yesterday." (END) producer. "I don't agree that we're shoemakers who make shows according to formula," said Roy Huggins (Run for Your Life, Maverick). "The network has never told me what they want in Run for Your Life. They take what I give them and like what I give them." However, Huggins admits NBC is getting a different picture of Run from the one advertised in his pilot, which indicated that Ben Gazzara would live out his days skin diving and chasing blondes. "I think in the beginning they thought they were getting a sophisticated drama series," Huggins said. "But not one that would be dealing with controversial issues. The first time I dealt with a controversial issue, I got a lot of en-

The most unhappy fellows in television

The pay may be great, but male models feel they're the industry's outcasts

By Cindy Adams

The ruggedly handsome 6-footer brushed a fallen lock from his forehead (taking care not to dull the hair tonic), then he filled up the whole television screen with his tooth-paste smile and moved sensuously toward the beautiful girl. The beautiful girl moved hurriedly away. Why, ask yourself? Doesn't she dig him? No, you fool, she doesn't dig his mouthwash.

"Even if we weren't filming the commercial that way, she'd probably still have recoiled," said Barry Bartle, one of the more successful male models. "Women who earn a living by means of their looks look contemptuously on men who are in the same category. They treat us like dirt."

"I recall one commercial where I had to stand very close to the female model. Just like not every actor is ecstatic about his leading lady, so it is that I'm not always fond of the particular woman with whom I'm working. In that case I concentrate on her nose or whichever single point she has that I find palatable."

"To establish intimacy it's helpful if you can have some rapport, so, besides gazing at her nose, I tried a little conversation. Well, she turned to me with an icy stare and snapped, 'I don't speak to male models!'"

The face that has stared out at the television public from inside Ford Mustangs, behind White Owl cigars, over Speidel watch bands, under Enden shampoos and through assorted Mennen shaving products fell silent a moment. Then, following a wry smile, Bartle added, "A male model is bad news. We're the lowest on the social scale."

I asked Augustyn, a one-named female who appears in our living rooms surrounded by Buick cars and Samsonite luggage, about this alleged prejudice. "Some stems strictly from our own doing," she answered. "We female models anticipate that these guys will be conceited and many are. They're egotistical and terribly aware they're good-looking. Also it strikes you that their work is a little unmanly. But it's the male models themselves who resent their profession more than we do. Some won't carry the traditional portfolio because it's a give away. They hide their photos in a folder and tell strangers they're 'in advertising.'"

A 25-year-old blonde who specializes in perfume ads and prefers anonymity because "this is such a gossip business and I have to work with these fellows" says, "It's obvious why we look down on them. The profession attracts homosexuals who love wearing pancake and who race you to the mirror to primp. The other kind feel obliged to prove their manliness, so they breathe too hard on your hair and mess it all up and you come off the set looking like you've been in a wind tunnel."

"Male models are hired purely to make us look good, because, barring men's-fashion layouts, ads favor the girl. In kissing scenes, whose nose is always in the foreground? The girl's. Even a real he-man model is nothing more than an accessory. He's to be considered nothing more than a beautiful Afghan hound."

Beautiful Barry Bartle, a happily married husband and father born in Australia, educated at Harvard and now up to his green eyeballs in acting lessons (he'll soon be seen in a Lloyd Bridges movie, "The Daring Game"), claims this contempt extends deep into advertising circles, "It's the →

Madison Avenue types who hire us and work with us who really resent us," he told me. "Some won't see models. They hire only actors. If they could find a way of peddling their products without ever using us, they would."

True, say the agency people, that the trend is toward actors when the characters in the commercial speak lines; but untrue, holler these same people, that models are denied any job they're right for.

Rolly Bester, casting supervisor at the Ted Bates advertising agency, explained her side of it: "It's nature's arithmetic that when there's great beauty it doesn't usually add up to great brains. I ask our clients, 'Will you sacrifice looks for talent?' The real male beauties you must treat like children. You have to tell them, 'Stand here, sit there, do this, do that,' and still they don't twig to it. They're just not smart usually."

Chandler Warren, director of casting at Young & Rubicam, says, "This dullness is engendered by the men themselves. They don't extend themselves. It's because eight hours every day they go out and face rejection. Theirs is a constant state of coming up hat in hand for casting calls and experiencing turndowns. To us, searching for the right type, it's impersonal. To them it's highly personal. They're not like the girls who can plan to chuck it all when they get married. The man's protective coloration is to withdraw. He builds a wall around himself. He figures, 'OK, you've bought me. You've paid for me. You tell me what to do.' It's a serious psychological problem."

Amidst the strobes, arc lights and paper drops of the Jules Alexander Studios, I spoke to Dave Brown. Dave is, to put it conservatively, mildly gorgeous. His dark eyes crinkle at the corners. His dark hair is often carefully tousled. He's 6 feet, weighs 160, is size 40, has a 31 waist and, according to the Ford Agency brochure, his inseam (whatever that is) is 31.

In the past nine years you've seen him jazzing up Scope; Alcoa Aluminum soft-top cans, Vista wax, Sinclair gasoline, Jell-o, Northeast and Pan American air lines, Carling and Schaefer Beer, Brylcreem and Alberto VO5 hair preparation, to name just a few of his annuities. Currently he's pushing Salem cigarettes.

I'd heard about one masculine male who went nighty-night with salve on his face and gloves on his lotioned hands. Although Dave didn't look as though he fought his wife for the cold cream, I asked if, unmanly though it sounds, he too has to protect his looks.

"Well, I can't eat everything because I can't gain weight," he replied. "I can't get hung over because I might have an important booking the following morning. I can't get sunburned because I might not match my previous shots."

"People figure we're surrounded by gorgeous girls in glamorous locations and we must really swing, but that's not so. You can't take a single chance with your looks. You can't afford to lose one booking because many times there are no bookings. You never know when your look will be out. Cycles vary according to time, fashion and whim. Sometimes silver-haired types are in. Sometimes it's young, mod types. Then it's the decadent, wrinkled face. Then it's the outdoorsy look. Modeling breeds insecurity. You could be last year's face very quickly."

Since ad campaigns are planned ahead, models often pose for hours in the summer heat in sweltering winter clothes. Since location jobs are planned for scenery, not comfort, models often change clothes in a car or behind a bush. Since as many as five men or women dress him from the skin up, a model often stands like a dummy → while someone stuffs his garments with tissue to remove wrinkles and somebody else irons his sleeve while it's on. He doesn't even tie his tie.

So, comes the next question. Do they enjoy their work? Andy Anderson, whose Salem-cigarettes, Dial-soap and Colgate-100 residuals make him tolerant, replies, "This is a business. I regard it as a profession which requires ability, conscious effort and diplomacy. It requires getting along with all types of people who have an ego problem. If you're a gay blade who wants to flit through, wearing pink shirts and with your hair on fire, that's one thing. However, if you approach the work as a full-time professional, you'll find it demanding but satisfying and enjoyable."

Dave Brown: "The bread and butter jobs call for no ability or skill and you don't kid yourself about that. You need only be on time, look good in wardrobe, photograph well and know when to look at the camera and when to look away. Sometimes all that's seen is the back of your head.

"Occasionally you feel like an idiot. Once I was filming in a revolving door. The photographer had a long lens and was on a nearby roof out of sight. I kept going around and around until he was satisfied. Meanwhile, the gaping passers-by couldn't figure out what this crazy nut was doing. Another time I was doing bathing suit shots in Jamaica and barely made the plane back for my next booking. Although it was midwinter, I flew home in bathing trunks.

"Frankly, if I had a son I don't think I'd want him to be a male model."

Barry Bartle: "We're treated like cattle. That's a translation from the phrase 'a cattle call,' whereby 30 hopefuls are penned together so the agency people can stare at us en masse like meat on a hook while we try avoiding everyone else's embarrassed looks. This business tears every vestige of self respect from you. I hate it."

Then why are these fellows in it? Money. There are approximately 300 men who make a buck by being pretty. The successful ones knock off a tidy $60 an hour for their "print" or newspaper and magazine work. For TV the minimum slave wage is $120 per eight-hour day, but many hotshot models demand and get their $60-an-hour fee, which is applied against residuals. If the commercial is the regular sponsor on a network program, residuals are $120 the first week, $75 the second and down to $60 for the 13th week. A sliding scale applies for the second 13-week cycle and so on.

For spot commercials, residuals are based on the number of cities. For one major city it's approximately $180 per 13 weeks. Two cities bring $260. Three bring $310. For 30 smaller cities it's the measly sum of $150. The same rates apply whether the model intones lines or stares mutely off in space.

Bob Ames has ground out 60 commercials for such as Lipton, Clairol, Pall Mall, ad infinitum. Between bookings I caught Bob and family painting the Sunday school of their church in Leonia, N.J. Said Bob, "There's nothing creative in modeling. There's no future in modeling. It's strictly a steppingstone. Some hope it leads to acting roles. Others, like me, keep saving that money until the right time comes to drop out of this and step into another business."

Bob, who holds a Bachelor of Science degree, added, "My mother nearly dropped dead when she heard I was modeling. She was actually ashamed. Then I explained that my salary as a science teacher was about nine thousand a year and I made that on one Clairol commercial alone!"

A male model whose face is in style can earn in the neighborhood of $30,000 to $50,000 a year and, as these fellows will tell you, that's a very nice neighborhood.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE MA KETTLE

Beth Brickell is a sophisticate even when playing second fiddle to a bear

By Ted Crail

Crouched on the couch in her apartment with her knees biting into the cushions, Beth Brickell looked more girl than woman. Certainly not motherly at all, though she plays the mother in Ivan Tors' TV series Gentle Ben. She explained that she had gone to Russia and become a deviationist—not in politics but in career.

The Russian journey was meant to crown her studies, in Arkansas and Scotland, for what she intended would be a sensational career in the U.S. diplomatic service. It didn't work out quite that way. She pulled out of Russia for Rome with $16 in her pocket (many an elder statesman does worse) and chose that moment to decide she was in the wrong field.

"In Rome," she said, "I decided the highest I could go in the foreign service would be ambassador."

Now what red-blooded Arkansas girl with an absolute obsession for winning cares to be tied down to a mere ambassadorship? She defied friends' predictions that she couldn't get a job in Rome, later returned to the States for a blitzkrieg that has carried her from novice to the Actors Studio to co-starring role in a series in just four years.

"My biggest problem in life is I always have to be the best," said Beth. "I can't even play Monopoly with Clint Howard without trying to beat him. Now he's a little boy and that's ridiculous! But you know"—an edge of competitiveness comes into her voice—"I always thought I was a champion at Monopoly and Clint is really good."

Clint and Dennis Weaver are her human co-stars in the series about a bear who cares. She "loves Clint," but she doesn't really expect to be beaten, not even at Monopoly, by an 8-year-old boy, a bear who burps, or anything else under the Palm Beach County sun. Down in the Florida swelter where they're shooting Gentle Ben, it's just as well to have a sturdy ego, because Ivan Tors has been known to walk on a set and shake hands with the bear, before greeting his actors, on grounds that he has "known the bear longer."

"Beth had trouble with the last press agent," one of the Ivan Tors men said, "because she thought he didn't present her on a high enough intellectual level."

Soon after we started talking, Beth leaped from the couch for a demonstration while explaining what a great fan she is of the Razorbacks, favorite football team, of football-maniac Arkansas. "Woooooowooo! Pigs!" she cried. "Sooooiieeeeeee!" That's a big Razorback yell, and it didn't hit me as offensively intellectual. Then Beth began ebulliently to explain all the great ideas of her life, including The Grace Kelly Way to Success and The Absolute Necessity of Not Being a Furniture Tycoon.

"I was 21 when I decided, five years ago, to be an actress," she said. "And that's like 31 for a man. I read about Grace Kelly because she had been a success in as fast a time as I hoped to be. I thought, 'There must be a right way to approach this. It can't all be lucky breaks and haphazard.' In six years, Grace Kelly went from high school girl to Academy Award winner and this is incredible. She knew the right things to do. She ended her career with self-respect—!"

"Would you marry a prince?" I interrupted.

"I don't want to be a princess!" she cried hotly. "The correlation doesn't go that far. Grace's agent was MCA, a giant, so I thought, 'Well! That must be the right thing to do.' And I held out for William Morris Agency because it was the biggest—"

She stopped talking about The Grace Kelly Way to Success to explain how easy it is, when you're obviously geared for early triumph, to start making a fortune where you hardly intended. Why, there was the flyer she took on imported Spanish wall systems—!

"I had calling cards—Beth Brickell, Sales Manager; Beth Brickell, President. I was even the truck driver. I felt I needed a man's name behind my company to deal with Macy's and so on, so I used a friend as the mysterious head of the company and I'd get a Hertz truck and deliver myself. Was I making money! I was on the verge of a tremendous operation. That's what's so heartbreaking. I was getting sidetracked and I didn't want to be a furniture tycoon. So I gave it up and started subletting apartments."

So there you have her—a simple, barefoot Arkansas girl in the same sense that Wendell Willkie was a simple, barefoot Wall Street lawyer.

She builds power systems fast, always did. Beth's parents, who brought her up in Camden, Ark., were both archery champions. As a schoolgirl, Beth would shoot bottle tops out of her schoolmates' hands with wooden arrows. She didn't worry about their hands. She trusted herself. And she still has a fancy for trick shots—even in the way she plays a TV role.

Beth picked up sizable fan mail from a brief part as a stewardess on The Girl from U.N.C.L.E. She thinks the fan mail came because of the way she played the part—"My attitude was that I was too special to be a stewardess."

Under the age of 30—Beth Brickell is 26—an actress changes with wicked speed. In college, she was one of the moodies ("a female James Dean"). Now she's New York-smart, pointing out that her clothes for woody Gentle Ben come from Saks Fifth Avenue. "You don't have to be Ma Kettle," she says.

She shoved the James Dean melancholy where she had shoved the Southern drawl. They're gone.

Gone? Well, she still has an Actors Studio side that flares up at "people who lord it over me." She had five speeding tickets in California and complained, "Police keep giving me moving violations I don't deserve. I'm my own attorney."

Her own attorney, natch. People who wouldn't think of getting cuddly with a bear might want to know from Beth whether working with a bear frightened her (it didn't). I soon understood that I should be interviewing the bear to see if he was frightened of Beth Brickell. She has definite ideas on the bear like everything else—Ben mustn't go the Flipper-Lassie route and become Sir Galahad in fur. ("This is not a kiddy show! The bear does not ever save the day!")

She puts the case for herself, and for humans, so forcefully I wondered if she was right to turn away from the diplomatic service. Why shouldn't a self-confident Arkansas girl believe that she might rise even to Secretary of State?

"As a matter of fact," she said, with only a trace of a smile, "I thought I could be Secretary of State—." END

ABC Will Switch Newscasters

ABC will go the Huntley-Brinkley route with its evening news next May, pairing Bob Young in New York with Howard K. Smith in Washington. Smith is on a semisabbatical until then, writing a book. While he won't be an anchor man, he will have dual billing with Young and be featured nightly, according to ABC News executive Bill Sheehan. Young is currently London correspondent for the network. He will take over from Peter Jennings on Jan. 1 because Jennings, after a Middle East foray last summer, "wanted to get out and be a reporter again," Sheehan said. The fact is that the young Canadian in three years in the prime news slot did not catch fire as competition for Cronkite and H-B. What surprised TV insiders was the choice of Young over Frank Reynolds, who had pinch-hit for Jennings last summer and again last month. "We decided Bob was the one who had the presence on the air we were looking for," Sheehan explained. Reynolds will continue on the White House beat for ABC.

The Man from U.N.C.L.E., whose popularity sagged badly this fall, will be retired by NBC in mid-January. The replacement show will be Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In, a comedy hour sneak-previewed in September. Two of NBC's new fall series, Maya and Accidental Family, also will be washed out. Jerry Van Dyke's comedy in favor of an evening edition of NBC's daytime Hollywood Squares, on Jan. 12, and Maya being replaced on Feb.

ABC has given up on Hondo, another entry that received low ratings, and will replace it Jan. 5 with a sort of traveling Hollywood Palace, playing U.S. military bases around the world. The premiere of ABC's Operation: Entertainment, as the new hour has been dubbed, already has been taped before 5000 Marines at Camp Pendleton with comedian Rich Little as host. Among future emcees already lined up: Mike Douglas and comic Flip Wilson.

As soon as President Johnson signed the Public TV bill into law, he named the first two members to a 15-man board he will choose (with Senate approval) to run a Corporation for Public Broadcasting, intended to spur development of noncommercial TV and radio in this country. The appointees: Dr. James R. Killian Jr., head of the Carnegie Commission which drew up the Public TV blueprint, and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, brother of the former President and retired head of Johns Hopkins University. Broadcast circles felt the caliber of the initial choices a good omen for the budding PTV.

CBS won't enter the late-night derby, after all. The network has notified its stations the search for a show to compete with Johnny Carson and Joey Bishop has been called off. Reason: Nothing hot enough was found.

—Richard K. Doan

LETTERS

Correspondence for this department should be addressed to Letters Department, TV GUIDE, Radnor, Pa., 19088. All letters must be signed. Names withheld upon request.

VIEWER SERVICE

If you wish to write comments to those in charge of a specific show, you should send your letters to: (Name of Show), TV GUIDE Viewer Service, Box 800, Radnor, Pa., 19088. These letters will be forwarded to proper executives.

HOW THE PUBLIC SAW PBL

Three cheers for the producers of Public Broadcast Laboratory. At last TV has shown its true capability. If the following shows of this series are as good as the first, viewers will certainly have something to cheer about.

Sandra Hartford
Scarborough, Maine

PBL was great. First time in years that I was really involved with a television program.

Bernard Robert Kingsley
Greensboro, N.C.

My husband and I watched the opening of PBL. It was the shortest two-and-a-half hours of watching we've ever experienced—and about the most exciting.

Anne Bushnell
Belmont, Mass.

I hope the first PBL was worth all the advance publicity. We in Georgia were not able to see it because someone "up there" blessed with the knowledge of the truth decided "the content of the show was not worthy of broadcast to the citizenry of the state. . . ." So we have been protected again—but I wonder from what?

Tom Spears
Decatur, Ga.

That first PBL program ought to make commercial television rest easy. Neither technically nor in content was it as good as much that has been on the air for years. Some of it (that so-called confrontation in Chicago) was nothing but a shouting match and much of the rest (that so-called play) was tedious and a big bore. Those in charge should go back to the drawing board.

Ken Roberts
Reading, Pa.

THOSE 'FRAUDS'

Your article on crooked TV repairmen was very interesting ["Set Repair Frauds," Nov. 11], but not too surprising or educational. Have you had your car worked on lately, had your plumbing fixed, been to the grocery store, or had the misfortune of having to see a doctor?

A. B. Coleman
Lynchburg, Va.

You have made several good points in "Set Repair Frauds." Only flaw was the advice to get an estimate of costs. Any good repairman will tell you that finding the trouble is 75 to 90 percent of the repair costs.

Dave Raley
Laurinburg, N.C.

I object! Your article is misleading and, for the most part, untrue.

James N. Pope Jr.

OUT OF ORBIT

Alas, Star Trek, one of the few original series to come to TV in many a season, has been diluted with over-used themes and plots which, I'm afraid, will lead to a premature splash-down of the series after only one successful orbit.

Neal Reinemann
Madison, Wis.

THIS WEEK'S MOVIES

By Judith
Crist

THE THRILL OF IT ALL (NBC), Saturday
McHALE'S NAVY (NBC), Tuesday
WIVES AND LOVERS (ABC), Wednesday
THE MONEY TRAP (CBS), Thursday
THE HORIZONTAL LIEUTENANT (CBS), Friday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

It's trivia time on the network-movie schedule with some dandy demonstrations of the triumph of script over situation and of sight gag over sense in comedy and with a number of performances that can make the least of films worth watching.

Old-timers and old-movie watchers are wont to think nostalgically of the Thirties as prime time for the sophisticated domestic comedy wherein Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas and Cary Grant thrived. A couple of this week's offerings are enough to set the old nostalgia aglow—and at the same time convince you that all has not really been lost. "The Thrill of It All," for instance, is different from the usual Doris Day-Ross Hunter concoction thanks to a Carl Reiner screenplay that lets Miss Day forget about preserving her virginity, act her near-age and concentrate on comedy. There's bounce and bite and lots of laughs to this tale of a housewife who makes it big with soap commercials and James Garner's fine as the husband who will stand for just so much suds. You'll forgive the faltering inspiration amid the frenzy and fun.

The same old "will success spoil marriage" theme is handled in reverse in "Wives and Lovers," wherein Van Johnson is a writer who makes it big and Janet Leigh is the wife who can take just so much upward mobility. It's old hat but stylishly refurbished by way of bright dialog and spry performances, with Shelley Winters superb as a sardonic divorcée.

Not, mind you, that all old themes can be reworked with the same success. The oldie about corrupt cops in a corrupt society is swathed in such ripe and raunchy dialog and plotting in "The Money Trap" that it becomes a tedious and trite melodrama. Its point of distinction, however, is a honey of a performance by Rita Hayworth as a boozy, victimized and worn-out woman, a brilliant bit indeed. Even such a distinction, however, was lacking in last week's "The Outsider," a disappointing second entry in the World Premiere series. This rambling, sensationalized, pot-luck-plotted private-eye yarn tried vainly to substitute camera tricks and pseudo-topicality (gurus and LSD trips are pretty pseudo by now) for coherence and point. Good performers were trapped in what boiled down to nothing more than violence and sadism for their own sweet sakes.

In another instance of television serving itself, there's "McHale's Navy," a movie tripling the half-hour situation comedy for small-screen devotees of Ernest Borgnine, Joe Flynn and the rest. And the Army gets its pratfalls via "The Horizontal Lieutenant," a dull mechanical service comedy. It's good to know that gifted young comedians like Jim Hutton and Paula Prentiss have survived entrapment therein. Even as you and I.

COLOR "ABC Scope's" 100th Vietnam report is a return to Hoa Binh, a small village that was the subject of a "Scope" profile in April 1966.

Hoa Binh is located in a farming area midway between Saigon and Danang. For the peasants, life means scraping a bare existence out of the soil—and desperately trying to survive in a village that is caught in the cross fire of a war.

Andrew Pearson produced both shows on Hoa Binh. He sums up the situation: "The Government has been trying to pacify, trying to govern, trying to protect an area that the Viet Cong has run for 20 years. Naturally, there has been little progress."

The villagers, whom Pearson lived with for weeks, discuss their country's struggle; the constant threat of roving VC; the value of American aid; and the presence of their Korean Army protectors, whom some villagers fear more than the VC.

The second area is the nuts and bolts of party politics, from the grass roots to the national organization. Nixon discusses primary elections, the workings of the electoral college and the importance of party loyalty. Also: the growing role of TV and the politics of "image making," which can turn a relative unknown into a Presidential hopeful almost overnight.

Host: Paul Niven, who covered Nixon's campaigns for the Presidency in 1960 and the California governorship in 1962.

Can You Hear Me? Even with a hearing aid, these four words are just garbled sounds to little Mary Beth Bull. She is 2½ years old. She is deaf. She has one hope of leading a normal life: communication with the world of sound around her. Watch as Mary Beth and her family discover how she and other children like her can learn to "hear" and to talk. Mrs. Spencer Tracy appears in this color presentation of 3M Company on ABC-TV.

CLOSE-UP*CAN YOU HEAR ME?9:30 7 11 13

SPECIAL COLOR Mary Beth Bull is a normal 2½-year-old, with one exception—she is deaf.

Producer-writer Lester Cooper, himself hard of hearing for six years, filmed this documentary to show a deaf child's struggle to make four senses equal to five.

Ingrid Bergman narrates as Mary Beth goes to the John Tracy Clinic in Los Angeles, where children are shown learning to speak. (Some deaf children hear only distorted sounds, and can't learn to speak until they can hear how words really sound.) Films capture Mary Beth's first experience with a hearing aid—when clear, new sounds penetrate her mute world.

Training for the deaf is discussed by Mrs. Spencer Tracy. (The clinic is named for her deaf son.) Mary Beth's parents discuss her problem, and receive a specialist's advice on helping Mary Beth break her personal sound barrier.

SPECIAL A conversation with Ingrid Bergman, whom film director Jean Renoir called "... so honest that she will always prefer a scandal to a lie."

After a professional absence of 21 years, Miss Bergman returned to the U.S. and took a starring role in "More Stately Mansions." Films show her on stage in the Los Angeles revival of Eugene O'Neill's drama.

In an interview with drama critic Cecil Smith of the Los Angeles Times, Miss Bergman discusses her first meeting with O'Neill (in 1941, when she starred in the West Coast production of his "Anna Christie"); her appearance in "Joan at the Stake," at Milan's famed La Scala opera house; and her early training at the Royal Academy in Stockholm. She also talks about roles she would like to play and her feelings about her return to Broadway. (60 min.)

Do you have a restless urge to write?

If so, you have much in common with successful authors. Read how 12 Famous Writers are helping people turn a restless urge for self-expression into success in writing

There's something different about people who feel the urge to write.

They have a spiritual hunger that sets them apart even from family and friends. They may be successful businessmen, model housewives, loving grandparents . . . but for these people that's not enough. They yearn for greater freedom, a more meaningful life, through self-expression.

If you have known this burning need to write, you too may have the gift that successful authors possess. It is, all in all, the recurring ache to put into words the people you've known or the life you have lived . . . to express your faith or your philosophy . . . to share your proudest thoughts and experiences with other human beings.

Many successful writers know the same feelings

The great author Sherwood Anderson abandoned a going business to write the stories welling up inside of him.

Rod Serling's urge to write made him a leading TV dramatist (Twilight Zone, Patterns, Requiem for a Heavyweight) and won him six Emmy awards.

Max Shulman, the humorist (creator of Dobie Gillis and Barefoot Boy With Cheek), says he started writing not so much because he wanted to but because he had to. In his own words: "Nothing else would serve; it was write or bust." Faith Baldwin, with all her literary fame, still says: "I've never written exactly what I dreamed I'd write . . . you keep on trying."

Successful authors like these know that anyone who shares this restless urge for self-expression has perhaps the most important ingredient of writing success. But they realize that it can waste away if you don't know how to get started writing . . . or if you hesitate to try for fear of failure.

On the inside pages of this folder, Gordon Carroll, director of the Famous Writers School, tells how twelve of America's most successful authors are helping people with talent learn how to write. And he tells you about a remarkable way to test your writing aptitude without cost. See details inside.

“We want to test your writing

If you have ever wanted to write, here is an opportunity to test your talent worth developing. Take this revealing Famous Writers School

By Gordon Carroll

If you want to write, my colleagues and I would like to test your writing aptitude. We'll help you find out whether you can be trained to become a successful writer.

We know that many men and women who could become writers — and should become writers — never do. Some are uncertain of their talent and have no reliable way of finding out if it's worth developing. Others simply can't get top-notch professional training without leaving their homes or giving up their jobs.

A plan to help others

Several years ago, we started the Famous Writers School to help promising beginners acquire the skills needed to break into print.

We poured everything we knew about writing into a new kind of professional training course — which you take at home, in your spare time. The course begins with the fundamentals of good writing. Then you get advanced training in the specialty of your choice — Fiction, Non-Fiction, Advertising or Business Writing.

Each of your assignments is carefully examined by instructors who are themselves professional writers or editors, working under the guidance of the 12 famous authors.

You are a class of one

Your instructor goes over your work by line, word by word, blue-penciling changes on your manuscript, much as an editor does with an established author. When he returns it to you with a long letter of advice and guidance.

Students breaking into print

This training works well. Our students have sold their work to more than 100 publications.

Steven Novak of Wayne, N. J., says, “I have sold 11 stories in the last six months.” Doris Stebbins of S. Coventry, Conn., writes, “Your Course made it possible for me to sell six articles to Woman's Day for $2,000.” William W. Blanks of Los Angeles, reports, “I've sold almost everything I've written since enrolling in your School.”

Beyond the thrill of receiving their work checked, our students find great intangible rewards in writing for publication. As Philip Baldwin puts it, “If one sentence you

Why writing can be a godsend for women

If you have ever felt there should be more to living than endless household or office drudgery, a flair for writing can make an exciting difference in your life. Among the rewards of a writing career — full-time or part-time — are money, recognition, the freedom to work when and where you choose. And something that may be even more important — a healthy, creative outlet.

As you start writing, you'll discover countless opportunities where being a woman puts you way ahead. These can range from modest magazine pieces on cooking to glamorous advertising jobs — even to bestsellers like Please Don't Eat the Daisies.

Whether you write for women or look to more general markets, you may be sure editors respect women's contributions as much as they do men's. But many women have doubts about their ability — or are unaware of it. To help you discover if you have writing talent worth developing, 12 Famous Writers have created a special Aptitude Test. Mail the card below to get your free copy.

The sea holds many stories for Doris Agee of San Mateo, Cal. . . . among them, childhood memories of a courageous friend who loved the ocean as she did. This gave Mrs. Agee the idea for a "Most Unforgettable Character" article she wrote and sold to the Reader's Digest after enrolling in the Famous Writers School.

Ten Days That Shook the World

SPECIAL This British-Russian production focuses on events relating to Russia's October Revolution of 1917.

Rare films include Trotsky addressing the Congress of the Soviets, excerpts from a propaganda film made by the provisional Kerensky Government and the coronation of Czar Nicholas II. (Nicholas offended by the sight of his awkwardness on film, ordered most of the footage destroyed.)

Among the dramatized scenes are Lenin's escape from Russia during the summer of 1917 and the shelling of Leningrad's Winter Palace by the cruiser Aurora, which fired the first shot in the uprising.

Orson Wells narrates the films, which are followed by an analysis (in color) of the revolution by Harry Schwartz, New York Times Soviet affairs expert, and foreign correspondent Rod MacLeish. (Two hours)

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids Stop Itching and Relieve Pain IN MOST CASES.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases—to stop burning itch, relieve pain and actually shrink hemorrhoids. Tests by doctors proved in case after case, while gently relieving pain and itching, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

The answer is Preparation H®. There is no other formula like it for the treatment of hemorrhoids. Preparation H also soothes inflamed, irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In ointment or suppository form.

Same Mud, Same Blood

SPECIAL COLOR Mid-September to mid-October found newsman Frank McGee in the northern region of South Vietnam with a platoon of the 101st Airborne. His assignment: Find out what the war is like for the Negro soldier.

It wasn't hard to find the war and report on it. Hand-held cameras, wireless microphones strapped to the GIs, and forays into enemy territory produced an in-depth combat story. The Negro "problem" proved more elusive.

Is the Negro accepted in the ranks—and does he make a good soldier? Does he command the respect of his men? Platoon sergeant Larry B. Lewis (see drawing) was questioned on these subjects, as were his men (who don't usually think about them). Their answers form the core of this report.

Narrator McGee also wrote the script.

A THREE-TIME LOSER TRIES AGAIN

Ron Harper is counting on 'Garrison's Gorillas' to bring him the recognition he admits he needs

By Dwight Whitney

For all of September and well into October the mammoth, brightly colored 48-by-14-foot billboard blinked down on travelers along Hollywood's gaudy Sunset Strip. "RON HARPER IS GARRISON," it screamed in the lettering style known in the trade as Superman Gothic. And "WATCH GARRISON'S GORILLAS." The entire left side of the "big board" is occupied by the handsome fullface of the man who, indeed, "is Garrison," the Cary Grant cleft well accented with the Max Factor eyebrow pencil he applies to his chin before he has his picture taken. Behind him rises a red atomic cloud. In his hand a German Schmeisser machine gun. Beside him a pack of dynamite sticks wrapped—for that exotic touch—in a fishnet. He looks the very model of the indomitable hero, ready for anything.

What Ron Harper is really ready for is success. The billboard, for which he personally paid $1500, is the psychological and spiritual culmination of his long fight to get out of the tiny Pennsylvania town in which he was born, cross over to the "right" side of the tracks, and achieve the recognition for which he has always lusted.

In television this transformation has not been easy. Ron is a three-time loser. He first came on the TV scene in 1961 in a near miss called 87th Precinct, a low-pressure police show with four male leads, in which he was upstaged by Robert Lansing. Three years later he tried again in Wendy and Me, another near miss in which he ran afoul of the producer and narrator, comedian George Burns. "George began doing more and more," Harper explained recently, "until finally he was doing flat-out comedy routines. Connie [Stevens] and I tended to get lost."

Last season his lot was even more unfortunate. He had to play the dutiful son of Jean Arthur in a show about a lady lawyer. Not only did Miss Arthur's former pre-eminence as a movie queen mean that every scene was written for her, but he had to say "Yes, Mother" a lot, the kiss of death for an actor whose principle commodity is masculinity. The Jean Arthur Show was short-lived.

When Garrison's Gorillas came along, he saw the opportunity to rise out of the mold. To be sure, the show was some patently melodramatic nonsense about a group of convicts—forgers, bank robbers, safe crackers, cutthroats, con men—promised a post-war reprieve in return for performing ultrahazardous missions behind the lines in World War II. But, as the lieutenant responsible for these hard-to-handle antiheroes, he was at long last in charge, dramatically and every other way. Ron just wanted to be sure everyone understood that.

At first he got some static. The show had a "second star," pointedly ignored in the Harper billboard. He was Cesare Danova, who plays "Actor," the con man and linguist. The handsome Danova was less than pleased with Harper's obvious preference for the spotlight. There were words. The other actors caught the bug. They suddenly decided that their characters were too "unheroic," and for a while producer Richard Caffey's office looked like an old set of Combat!, the show which Garrison's replaced.

The network, glad of the free publicity, looked on all the fuss over the billboard with bemusement. "The other actors angry?" giggled one ABC executive. "So—let 'em take their own billboard."

Only later did the company settle down. The insurgents discovered, as Harper's friends have, that he is far from the usual posturing, egotistical actor. "Realistic, yes," says one who knows him well. "But Ron is simply not the type to bore you by constantly talking about himself. Nor does he give you the bit about how what he really wants to be is an artist and do Broadway plays and Elia Kazan movies. His need is simple—it's called Recognition. And he is dead honest about it."

He was born to the need. Turtle Creek was a dot on the map of Pennsylvania. Ron was constantly aware that he came from the wrong half of the dot. His father—"a simple man, small of stature but pure of heart," was a laborer in a foundry. His mother, large and dominant, was the decisive influence in the family. Ron, his older brother, George (who now works for the State Department), and his younger sister, Marian (who married an Air Force major), inherited their philosophy from her.

"Every kid seeks recognition. 'Study!' my mother said. 'Take your piano lessons! Get out of town! Don't end up being a pick-and-shovel man!' I studied. I found that good grades gave me recognition of sorts. I got straight A's from eighth grade on. My mother said, 'Go to college, study law!' So I got a scholarship to Princeton."

The law constituted a pretty fair social reference and there was no tonier place to prepare for it than Princeton's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. Ron would no doubt have gone on to Harvard Law School (to which he had a fellowship) had he not discovered an even flashier form of "recognition": acting.

The University Players had once spawned the likes of James Stewart, José Ferrer, Margaret Sullivan and Henry Fonda. Now it was about to spawn young Ron Harper. For a kid from Turtle Creek it was dazzling. Broadway directors like José Quintero, playwrights like John Van →

Druten came around. When Ron played Caliban in "The Tempest," it was Albert Einstein himself who came backstage to congratulate and be photographed with the cast. As a political-science major he shifted his thesis around until its subject was "The Efficacy of Art as an Instrument of Propaganda," in which he argued that emotion, not reason, swayed people. By the time he graduated in 1954, he was thoroughly infected.

When his English professor, also a theater buff, said he thought Harper would make an actor, it was good-by to the law. With Quintero's help he landed in a Broadway play with Joan Blondell; it promptly closed, setting a pattern which was to continue for a while. The Navy got him in 1956 and he spent most of his hitch acting on a small Panama naval base.

Still he hardly set the world on fire. In the 1958-59 season, for example, he read for 23 plays, made it in only one, "The Night Circus," with Ben Gazzara and Janice Rule. But by the time it hit Broadway, his part had been written out.

Christopher Held, an actor who knew him when, remembers: "He was fantastically energetic. He lived, breathed, ate, drank acting. He was highly critical of all plays and other actors. He wasn't a big Sardi's man; he didn't want to get filled with other actors' ideas. At heart he was a country boy. Sure he liked money, success, but he also liked to go out and chop wood for the fireplace."

For a good-looking "Broadway actor" who had never really done much Broadway acting, TV was inevitable. Ron landed in 87th Precinct through a combination of geographical circumstance (he was on tour in "Sweet Bird of Youth" at the time) and an energetic agent.

When Precinct failed to make him into an instant Laurence Olivier, there were several times, he says, when "I contemplated walking into the ocean." Luckily there was a beautiful girl eager to soothe him. She was Danny Thomas's daughter, Marlo. They met in 1962, did a play together, "Sunday in New York," and carried on like a couple of star-crossed lovers.

In 1963 Ron pulled off a spectacular romantic tour de force. When he first arrived in Hollywood, the walls of his apartment were bare. Characteristically, rather than buy paintings he decided to paint his own. He developed a surprising facility, if no particular genius, with the paintbrush. Now he embarked upon his most ambitious project—Marlo Thomas as the Mona Lisa.

It took him five months, working up to 14 hours a day. He painted it to seven-eighths original scale, and had two advisors, one from the UCLA art department. He finished just in time for Christmas.

Marlo went out of her mind. When the two of them split two years later, Marlo kept the painting. It still hangs in her apartment. "I wonder," mused Harper recently, "what her boy friend thinks."

He has always been very big with the ladies—his girls have included a Miss Panama, a Spanish ambassador's daughter, and a psychiatric nurse—but no one dented him quite the way Marlo did. "The velvet steam roller," he called her. "We were two very strong personalities. Willful. It can produce strong clashes. Marlo had a choice. There is a helluva lot of woman on one side and a helluva lot of business—a machine!—on the other. I was very involved and it took me a while to get over."

He lives in a modest two-bedroom house in a Tarzana orange grove which looks as if it might belong to a prominent local dentist. It has the usual pool and built-in hi-fi, a cat named George and a large, bumptious dog named Ralph Earl Bothwell. On the bed, his mother's patchwork quilt. On the walls, his paintings—Utrillo-like French street scenes, Waugh-like seascapes, even primitives.

No Daisy man he; he prefers to take his work-outs in an Encino gym. Or practice up on his Spanish grammar with his non-English-speaking Spanish housekeeper, Esperanza. He likes conversation. He is a chair-arranger. He makes no bones about his politics—liberal. He has been at one time or another hooked on the bullfight.

Home is where his friends come to see him—people like Christopher (né Karl) Held, the actor; William Price Fox, the writer; his girl-of-the-hour, Jo Ann Pflug, a pretty luminary of morning TV.

"Ron constantly surprises me," Fox says. "Once he picked up a book of short stories—mine—and started to read. Not easy with the Southern dialects. Great. He is a much better actor than we think."

As for Garrison's Gorillas, Harper figures that with a little running luck he's got it made. To the critics who have complained about its "vicious violence" at the kiddie-hour of 7:30, Ron has the back of his velvet hand.

"So it's the same old war, a Western with machine guns. So we blow up everything in sight. It's where it's at for me."

THE GIRL IN MARILYN MONROE'S APARTMENT

She's Lois Nettleton,
a serious actress who plays for laughs on a TV farm

She steps lithely, sensuously, through the shower curtain, a pretty girl wearing only a smile and a towel. The camera cranks away. Wow! A Brigitte Bardot flick in the making? No, no, this is television, and here, presumably, is the first towel scene ever shot for the antiseptic medium. And the girl, she's one of your Hollywood sexpots, isn't she? Not likely. Not Brigitte, not Sophia, not Raquel. It's Lois Nettleton, is who—from the New York stage and the Actors Studio.

And it's all played for comedy, not prurience. "It felt just like Doris Day movie time," says Miss Nettleton later, scraping off the body makeup. "You know, innocence entrapped by circumstance." She puts on clothes more suited to her role of the "tenant" farmer in Accidental Family, the NBC offering, and goes out again to face the cameras. But the towel scene lingers in her mind. "Sex," she giggles, "comes to Sunnybrook Farm. Maybe it'll come to the Ponderosa next."

Lois Nettleton. She considers it a square, schoolmarmish name, and once, briefly, she acted as Lydia Scott. Truthfully, the name is better known to the profession than to the public. With a formidable list of credits on Broadway, films and TV, she ranks among the most respected young actresses around. Producer Sheldon Leonard spotted her in an episode of The Fugitive, remembered her work and then tabbed her for his Accidental Family. "The word 'actress,'" says Leonard, "is practically written across her forehead."

Another producer, Quinn (Fugitive, FBI, The Invaders) Martin, says about her: "She has an honest ingenuousness that gets to you. She has to end up a big star in the Katharine Hepburn-Norma Shearer vein." Maurice Evans recalls their work together on a TV version of Shaw's "Heartbreak House": "When Lois was required by the playwright to say to me, 'I should have married you, Captain,' there was a strong temptation to tear off my wig and whiskers and take her up on the offer!" →

"I need an awful lot of reassuring," Lois says. And, as the foregoing indicates, she gets it. Nonetheless, she's clearly bedeviled by one of the larger cases of galloping insecurity on record. Once, at Universal Studios, a visitor leaned out of one of those tourist trams and waved his autograph book at Lois. "Are you anybody?" he demanded. She hesitated. "Uh, I'm not sure," blurted Lois, guest-starring that week on The Virginian. "I'm really not sure." Then she scrawled her name across the page.

Recalling the above, she sits at a table in the commissary at Paramount, where Accidental Family is filmed. Earlier she had strolled by a table where Otto Preminger was holding court. "Hello, Mr. Preminger," Lois said. "Remember me—Lois Nettleton?" Preminger glanced up, half-rising. "Ah, yes, Lois Nettleton—you were very good, my dear, in 'Period of Adjustment,'" he says, beaming with Prussian politeness. "Thank you," Lois says and moves on. Later she muses: "I was one of hundreds of girls he tested for Joan of Arc, but I'm sure he doesn't remember that." Typical Nettleton response. The old insecurity, setting aside the compliment and recalling instead a disappointment of the past.

There's also the matter of her looks. With her strong, even features, a trim but not spectacular figure and green-blue eyes that almost plead for acceptance, she seems as plain to some as she is pretty to others. Director George Roy Hill calls her "a rare example of a woman who grows sexier as she grows older."

Well past 30 but still capable of playing a coed, Lois is a former Miss Chicago who was a semi-finalist in the Miss America contest. Not bad. But she remembers: "One time a movie talent scout took a look at me and grunted, 'First, do something with your hair. Then get your teeth capped.' He made me feel like some kind of a bug. I cringed my way out of his office." An afterthought: "Well, I was mousy." A mousy Miss Chicago? "Oh, that?" she smiles. "I read from Shaw for the talent part and it must have shaken up the judges." Then she turns somberly introspective. "If you've once been homely," she says, "you're always homely inside."

It was, she insists, as a homely child and adolescent that she grew up in Chicago—she was born in suburban Oak Park, Ill.—living with her divorced mother and assorted relatives. At 7 she was romping through plays of her own in the back yard. In high school she performed in class dramas and apprenticed at the various suburban theater groups that ring the city. At 16 she began her studies at Chicago's vaunted Goodman Theater.

Ambition drove her to New York, where she did odd jobs, ushered in theaters, addressed envelopes and, occasionally, acted. "I was so miserably self-conscious," she says. "I'd go into actors' hangouts and sit there, like a lump, waiting for someone to talk to me. I'd slouch into producers' offices and whisper about my acting qualifications. I quaked at every threshold."

Despite her own self-doubts, Lois notched slow, steady advances as an actress—"I'm a one rung at a time girl, a muller, a chewer." She trained at the Actors Studio. As Kim Hunter's replacement, she drew good notices in "Darkness at Noon," touring with Edward G. Robinson. There was a solid part in "Silent Night, Lonely Night," with Henry Fonda. She won a Clarence Derwent award as the season's best supporting actress in "God and Kate Murphy." She worked with Katharine Hepburn in the Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Conn.

And there was television—the *Naked City*s, The Nurses, East Side/West Sides in New York; the Twilight Zones, Dr. Kildares, Fugitives, Vir- ginians et al., on the Coast. She also turned up in several movies, notably the Tennessee Williams comedy "Period of Adjustment."

Typically, the only review she can quote from memory was less than complimentary: "The critic wrote this about me—'Miss Nettleton clasped her hands behind her back and thrust her stomach forward in a typical ingénue attitude.'"

A thinking man's actress, she has already played Euripides' Electra in stock and hopes to portray Lady Macbeth. The transition from such lofty roles to a filmed comedy series she explains simply: "I'm not a household word and it would be nice to be one. A series, if it clicks, can do that for you."

Most series, however, don't click. Accidental Family has turned out to be one of the season's first casualties—NBC will remove it from the air in January. Lois does not hide her disappointment. "It's a shock when it happens," she says, "when you feel you have something good. And it didn't get a chance to breathe. It went against the second half of 'The Great Escape' [a CBS movie], which had one of the highest ratings. Two weeks after that we were pre-empted by the President. Two more shows and we were gone."

"I'm kind of philosophical about it," she adds. "I'm grateful to have had it. I was glad to be able to work out here, to be able to do comedy. I think it has helped my future."

Bob Sweeney, who directed some episodes of Accidental Family, believes that her future will be bright. "There's something always happening in her eyes," says Sweeney. "She's more than just a face the star talks to." Says the star of the series, Jerry Van Dyke: "I was a little uncertain at first, Broadway actress and all. But she's a real actress and she makes you feel real."

"An actress," says Lois June Nettleton, "is all I ever wanted to be. Acting is my spine. The thing about acting is, you're always poking around inside yourself, looking for emotions. You just can't go through that poking all the time and still be 'normal.' You may seem normal outwardly, but that's only on the surface."

When she isn't delving into her own complex psyche, Lois Nettleton is an outgoing smiler and an easy laugh, both obvious assets in her marriage to the humorist-author, Jean Shepherd, a New York radio performer. She's an inactive Catholic, a political liberal, an astrological Leo and a self-stamped female Hamlet. "Indecision throws me," she says. "Give me two choices to make and I'll inevitably come up with a third."

She is at once an impractical romantic—in her jobless days she once shelled out her entire savings of $120 for a Chinese painting—and a crisp realist who knows the numbers on her bank statement to the penny. She still enjoys fairy stories by Grimm and Andersen. But she also plays no-nonsense poker with the stagehands. She's a nut for crossword and jigsaw puzzles. "Sometimes I think that's what acting is—solving a puzzle," she says. "It's fitting in the pieces and when they're all in the proper place the character emerges whole."

Out in Hollywood for the series, Lois has been living in a Beverly Hills pad once inhabited by Marilyn Monroe. "It's a little spooky, a bit wistful," Lois admits. "I'll stand in front of the full-length mirror and I'll think to myself, 'Marilyn Monroe stood here. This mirror knows her.'" In Hollywood, where stars are forever associated with their dwellings, it is still known as "Marilyn Monroe's apartment." Lois wonders momentarily if her own imprint might ever seep into the atmosphere. Then she shakes her head. The old self-deprecation has set in again. "No," she says, resignedly, "when I move out, they'll still call it 'Marilyn Monroe's apartment.'" END

WHO KILLED HOLLYWOOD SOCIETY?

THE NEW ORDER TAKES OVER

Last of five parts

By Cleveland Amory

Everybody complains about Hollywood Society, but nobody does anything about it. An exception is something called The 20th Century-Fox Talent School.

This school, formed 18 months ago, takes only about one of every 25 applicants, and gives them seven-year contracts and a starting salary of $175 a week with six-month options. It's the personal baby of Fox's new cub chief, Richard Zanuck. And through it Mr. Zanuck obviously aspires not only to do something about Hollywood Society but also to put the old Hollywood back into the new. For, posted on the school bulletin board, for all students, is a stern notice which reads, in part:

What Is Expected of You

The image of "the Star" is what has made Hollywood great. You will reflect that image constantly, whether at the studio, or shopping for groceries.

You are being groomed for stardom in every possible way. That means that you must be a master of your craft, be able to walk with poise, speak with assurance and clarity, and behave with propriety. You will learn to be gracious to anyone and everyone in preparation for the day when you yourselves will have fans and admirers of your own.

The time has passed for stars to resemble the boy and girl next door or the beatniks. When someone pays money to go to the movies they expect to see handsome, clean-looking, healthy young people—not slovenly, mumbling, scratching delinquents. . .

. . . You will dress properly. That means no more sweat shirts, sweaters and blue jeans. No more straggly hair, slacks and sneakers. . . .

Contract players adjudged to be lazy, untidy or undisciplined will be eliminated from the Studio Roster.

The notice is signed by Miss Pamela Danova, who is "Co-ordinator of the Talent School Program." We hunted down Miss Danova and found her very down-to-earth about stars. "We do not," she told us sternly, "ever use the word 'starlet.' We feel it is a cheapening word."

Ironically, Miss Danova was once a starlet herself, albeit an English one, under J. Arthur Rank. She told us that Mr. Zanuck had decided, where stars were concerned, to go back to the old way of Hollywood and, in a sense, "grow their own." With that in view, we gathered, the studio was beating the bushes for pretty faces and figures whether or not they could act. "We don't take them for their acting ability," Miss Danova told us. "We take them for the quality they have. Of course you can't teach talent. You can't even develop it. Nobody develops talent in a person—you either have it or you don't. You cannot really teach people to act either—all you can do is teach them to listen and react. But you can bring out talent if it's there. Stars are, after all, individuals—and you can bring out the quality that makes individuals.

"Each pupil is trained along the lines of his, or her, individual personality.

We can tell everyone the answers to how something should be done, but the net result would be a parrot or a puppet. We teach, for example, the pupil with a foreign accent to speak understandable English, but we do not try to eliminate the native flavor from their speech, since it is a valuable part of their personality. We also teach them that, if they are on stage in a scene with one person, never to forget that there are three people involved in the scene—the third being the audience.

"Above all," she concluded, "the first thing we teach our pupils, or try to teach them, is how lucky they are to be in a talent school where they are paid, trained and exposed to audiences all for free."

Miss Danova had no worries about the studio being able to make the necessary "names" out of her pupils. "The whole name thing nowadays," she says, "is just a big machine. When they push the button, they grind out the name."

It occurred to us that what Miss Danova said also applied to Hollywood Society—and, make no mistake, the people who push the button nowadays in this Society are primarily publicity people. Even the Vincente Minnelli, for example, possibly the most publicized of all Hollywood hosts, are so not so much because Mr. Minnelli is a distinguished director, but because Mrs. Minnelli serves as a kind of West Coast stringer for New York's Society columnist "Suzy."

Stringer or not, however, Mrs. Minnelli is, in the old Hollywood tradition, a feuder. When, a couple of years ago, Sharman Douglas, daughter of a former Ambassador to the Court of St. James, gave her widely publicized party for Princess Margaret and Lord Snowden, without Mrs. Minnelli, the latter was stern. "Sharman had," she said grimly, "the 'B' group. She had all the short, bald-headed agents." "The 'B' group," sniffed →

Sharman in reply. "Fred Astaire?"

Nonetheless there was significance in the emergence on the Hollywood scene of Miss Douglas herself—a paid public-relations girl who calls the President of the Philippines "my new best friend." There was also significance in the fact that the only really private entertainment for Princess Margaret and Lord Snowden—outside of a visit to see the art at the homes of the Sid Brodys and the Vincent Prices—was a "cozy" dinner given by Frank McCarthy and Rupert Allan, the former being former public-relations director and now producer at Fox, and the latter being head of a public-relations firm which handles a wide variety of personages from Princess Grace of Monaco on down. And this summer, when Princess Grace and Prince Rainier came to town, the Los Angeles Times noted: "Gov. and Mrs. Reagan did not invite the visiting Monegasques to an intimate dinner for 200, but actor Rock Hudson did. Mayor and Mrs. Sam Yorty did not serve up a modest and exclusive brunch in their honor, but press agent and party-giver Rupert Allan did."

One star even went so far as to change PR firms on the promise that the new one would have his wife and himself invited to the "right" parties. "Social contacts here," says Frank McCarthy, "follow professional contacts almost immediately—and vice versa." Adds Dan Jenkins, of the Rogers, Cowan & Brenner office, "All that matters is 'the industry' or, after two drinks, 'our art form.'"

One of Hollywood's biggest problems at such parties is what to wear. At the Rock Hudson party, for example, people were invited to come "very informal" and the men were requested to wear no ties. Indeed, those who arrived with ties were asked to remove them—Jack Benny being one of the few holdouts. Mrs. William Dozier, the former Ann Rutherford, recently solved Hollywood's traditional dislike of "black tie" by asking her male guests to wear "sincere suits." "After all," she says, "'business suits' sounds so stuffy and 'blue suits' sounds so pretentious—and it also isn't right. There's nothing wrong, is there, with charcoal gray?"

The second major problem at Hollywood parties today is, ironically, the showing of movies. A wide variety of Hollywood hosts have large projection facilities—including the William Goetzes (she is the daughter of the late Louis B. Mayer), the Ray Starks (she is the daughter of the late Fanny Brice) and the Kirk Douglasses (who, curiously, are themselves). Stars call such showings "the Bel-Air circuit," and more than one has begged his producer to keep his film off it. "You see," one star explained to us, "they judge a film by personal jealousies, not on the merit of the film itself. Honestly. They actually talk back at you on the screen. And what can you do? Talk back at the talk back?"

Up until recently, the place to see Hollywood Society at play—or Hollywood play at Society—was at The Daisy. The Daisy is a three-year-old night-club discotheque on the exact spot—in fact using the same basic building—as the old Romanoff's. It is, however, as different from the old Romanoff's as Czarist Russia is from the present-day Kremlin—and as present-day Hollywood Society is from that of the past.

A membership club, The Daisy possesses an unprepossessing exterior, a disappointing entrance and a positively ghastly interior. In the main room, where there is dancing, the place is jammed, the canned music is, of course, raucous rock 'n' roll, and the scenery is largely composed of slithery girls who seem below the age of consent but who are probably grandmothers. There is a pool room, a bar and, upstairs, a ping-pong room.

There is also a room upstairs for private parties—which, typically for nowadays, is practically never used.

It is all owned and operated by a man named Jack Hanson of "Jax" clothes fame. Mr. Hanson, a casual but bouncy man, together with his wife Sally, started The Daisy because, he was quoted at the time, "The time when an individual in our culture can be sustained merely by communication between himself and his mate is past."

In the time that has passed since that quote, Mr. Hanson's quotes have become less formidable. This is in keeping with the fact that he was recently named, by no less an authority than Nancy Sinatra Jr., as "one of the three most important men in America today." The other two? Her father and Hugh Hefner.

Sitting with Mr. Hanson in The Daisy, with the swirling movement around us, we were privileged to hear, direct from the horse's mouth, the inside story of what passes, or perhaps has passed, for Hollywood Society:

"The difference in Hollywood Society is that there is more of a definite young group that is a group. The older group is tight and socially cliquy. The old thing has gone forever. It's old hat. Those stuffy dinner parties. That was a childish, rigid way to live. Nobody had any fun.

"Look over there. That's John Ireland and George Hamilton hugging each other. That's what I mean. They didn't even know each other before they started coming here. They know they're OK, you know, if they are here. I've learned who the good guys are and who the asses are.

"We have Deana Martin, she's 18, and we have Harry Kurnitz, he's 58. We have Rex Harrison and Laurence Harvey and Sam Spiegel and Sinatra. You name anybody in Hollywood on the top and they were in here.

"But nobody gets in unless they pay the original membership. Otherwise, it insults the others. We let Julie Andrews in, because she's an important star, but generally they all join—and then there's no problem; and what the hell, the Government's paying for it anyway.

"I'm 48. I used to go to Romanoff's in the old days. Here no one is more important than anyone else. There are no reservations. It's first come, first served, and they don't care which table they get. Our policy from the opening was not to be a moneymaking proposition but a place where everybody could get together and have a good time without any bull. Oh, look, there's Tuesday Weld and her husband, what's-his-name.

"It's the new thing. People are much more loose than they were in the old days—and not just in dress, either. In the old days people were extremely conscious who they were sitting with. Today the biggest director of all will sit beside a nobody, and if they're attractive and interesting, he won't give a damn.

"Those two things are the only things that count here: (1) Are they attractive and (2) are they fun? If they're a celebrity, they've still got to be both. Most celebrities, you know, are a pain in the neck.

"That's Zsa Zsa Gabor's ex-husband over there dancing with the girl with the red bow in her hair. We have an expression called 'goofy girls.' They're fun, cute, uninhibited. Everybody picks up one of them. See that girl in the mini-skirt dancing with what's-his-name—they're just having fun. A couple will come in and bring a goofy girl or a single fellow will bring one—it doesn't make any difference.

"We open at 8:30, but nobody comes in until 11, and we have to close at 2. We don't serve anything to eat except desserts and pies and fruit and coffee and stuff, and we only charge $1.50 a drink, and we don't push them. →

We've only had one drunk in three years.

"I ran a dress shop here for years and I know everybody. The property was vacant for four or five years. Memberships now cost $1000, and just between you and me, you have to know me to get one or get in.

"I have a code system—to reach me on the telephone. One guy offered me a new Chevrolet for a membership. Another guy says he's very important—he's the head of an air line. Still another guy calls me and says, 'I'm a great friend of the Aga Khan.' But I won't let just any jerk in—our members would feel like suckers. Sure I've made two or three mistakes—but nobody talked to them and they didn't come back.

"Already this is the most famous club in the world. We don't have a press agent and we've never sought publicity. At the beginning I decided not to let any columnists in—the celebrities said they could relax better. I have found, though, that they say things like that for effect, so I decided to let them in. We have Harrison Carroll, for instance, every Friday night. But most of them still think we don't let 'em in, and we let it stay that way. Hi, Charlie! Hi, Russ!

"It's like having a party every night but without that tenseness and such. You don't know who's coming and you don't care when they leave. As time goes on, we plan to import whatever new thing comes along. We may open up another room—the old Romanoff's kitchen. But we're going to be awfully careful. It's so perfect—we're not going to tamper with it.

"We don't just have actors and actresses. We have Pancho Segura and Pancho Gonzalez. We have a jockey, Bill Shoemaker, and we have another Billy who's a jockey too—what's-his-name. Hey! What's the other Billy's name? Oh, Hartack. We have the conductor of the L.A. Philharmonic too—what's-his-name. We have Leo Durocher. But whoever we've got, we've got the tops—the gentlemen."

Mr. Hanson paused a moment. He asked us what we thought of The Daisy. We told him we thought it was the end.

And, to all intents and purposes, it was. But hardly was our interview with Mr. Hanson over when lo, a new Daisy arose—and the Hollywood people knew not Jack. For, on our most recent visit, the talk was all of the "new" place. This place is called, simply, The Factory, for the simple reason that it actually is an old factory, complete with an ancient factory elevator. But the nine director-owners of The Factory—Paul Newman, Sammy Davis Jr., Anthony Newley, Pierre Salinger, Peter Lawford, Jerry Orbach, Peter Bren, Ronnie Buck and Dick Donner, all of whom, ironically, were either close personal friends or best customers of Jack Hanson—have decorated their huge, barnlike emporium within an inch of its life. Hung over the dance floor is a mosaic of stained-glass windows, and whereas the music at The Daisy was discotheque, that at The Factory is live. Whereas The Daisy had only one pool table, The Factory has four. Whereas the old Daisy did not serve dinners, The Factory does. And, whereas conversation is difficult at The Daisy, it is, in The Factory, impossible—which, young people nowadays being what they are, is, apparently, essential.

Nonetheless, for those creatively inclined, there is, in The Factory restaurants, probably the most complete collection of graffiti in existence. We jotted down several:

Peter Lawford Lives

Not All Steves are McQueens

Down with Graffiti—yeah, down with all Italians and a final one:

Aren't We All Too Much

TV Teletype: Hollywood

More television producers and stars are filming their shows abroad. GENE BARRY goes to Europe to board "The Big Train," a two-hour Universal telefilm. JOHN SAXON also rides the mystery-intrigue vehicle from Paris to Istanbul . . . And GEORGE MAHARIS (Route 66) hits the road again. He's heading to the Philippines for "Operation Mindanao," a World War II TV movie . . . MARK MILLER (Please Don't Eat the Daisies) is another—he's starring in European Eye, a London detective-series pilot. MARK reportedly is to be paid $20,000 for the pilot episode and $5000 per segment if it sells.

RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN (Dr. Kildare) is in a six-hour BBC-TV production of HENRY JAMES' "Portrait of a Lady." It may be shown in this country too . . . HOWARD KEEL stars in RED SKELTON's Dec. 19 Christmas show, written by the redhead . . . FRED ASTAIRE hired SERGIO MENDES and his BRAZIL 66 for ASTAIRE's Feb. 7 NBC special. SIMON and GARFUNKLE will be there too . . . BOB HOPE took a mini-role in Get Smart, playing the part of a waiter.

HOPE LANGE stars in The Ghost and Mrs. Muir pilot they're making at 20th Century-Fox . . . BARBARA HERSHEY (The Monroes) tries her series luck again, this time in The Princess and Me for Screen Gems. JEREMY SLATE plays "Me," a Government agent assigned to protect visiting royalty . . . DOROTHY PROVINE signed with producer ROY HUGGINS for "The Adversaries," a two-hour TV film with GUY STOCKWELL and JAMES FARENTINO. She plays a magazine writer "who becomes involved in a murder case," not unusual for a magazine writer. Stunt-pilot FRANK TALLMAN crashes an airplane into a barn for the show, all in a day's work for him.

BUDDY ROGERS and RICHARD ARLEN appear on the Dec. 18 LUCILLE BALL show, doing a musical parody of their vintage film "Wings." ARLEN sings and ROGERS plays a trombone in the episode . . . Everybody in DENNIS WEAVER's house is getting into show biz. One of his sons did a Gentle Ben part recently. Now DENNY's greyhound, Fier Og, romps through an episode . . . As if AGNES MOOREHEAD doesn't get enough sorcery in Bewitched, she's playing the Indian "spirit woman" in one of Custer's last stands on television.

Producer BRUCE GELLER (Mission: Impossible, Mannix) moves into theatrical-film making. He'll write and produce "The Executioners," a suspense film for Paramount . . . The usually voluble LARRY STORCH is a milquetoast forger for a Garrison's Gorillas plot. ABC has ordered Garrison to continue the battle for at least 26 segments. And NBC told Run for Your Life to keep running . . . TRUMAN CAPOTE's "A Christmas Memory" recently won the Golden Gate Award for Excellence at the San Francisco International Film Festival. The show, originally telecast on ABC last December, will be repeated on Dec. 19.
